

Comptroller of the Currency
Administrator of National Banks

US Department of the Treasury

Biographies

Grace Dailey Deputy Comptroller for Large Banks

Grace E. Dailey was named deputy comptroller for large banks at the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC) in October 2001.

Ms. Dailey, who had served since February, 1997 as examiner-in-charge for Citibank, reports to Douglas W. Roeder, senior deputy comptroller for Large Banks.

"In her 18 years at the OCC, Grace has tackled some of the most demanding and complex issues affecting large banks" said Mr. Roeder. "Her experience and expertise make her the perfect choice to help us navigate any difficulties that may lie ahead."

Ms. Dailey is one of three deputy comptrollers overseeing the large bank group.

Ms. Dailey graduated from the University of Wisconsin, Eau Claire, in May 1982 and joined the OCC in April, 1983 as assistant national bank examiner in Minneapolis. In April 1991, she was promoted to the position of capital markets expert and in September, 1993, she became a multinational examiner assigned to First National Bank of Chicago, a position she held until becoming examiner-in-charge at Citibank.

